Doha meet discuss challenges of change

US-Islamic World Forum begins

By Francesca Astorri

DOHA: The 2012 US-Islamic World Forum was opened by the Prime Minister and Foreign Minister H E Sheikh Hamad bin Jassim bin Jabor Al Thani and the Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of State for Cabinet Affairs HE Ahmed bin Abdullah Al Mahmoud with Bangladeshi Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina at the US-Islamic World Forum in Doha yesterday.

International community has let down Syrians, says Nobel Peace laureate

By Azmat Siraj

DOHA: Syrians have been let down by the international community, the support has not ended but it has gone into hibernation, said Nobel Peace Prize Laureate Tawakel Karman (pictured) during the US-Islamic Forum which was held yesterday.

“We have to choose between the path of change, Sheikh Abdullah Bayyah, who teaches at the King Abdulaziz University in Saudi Arabia, explained that it was a domestic revolution that created obstacles.

Kim Stanley Robinson: “We don’t want to interfere in the problems of Syria. We only want what is best for its people,” the Prime Minister said.

Talking about the US-Islamic Forum, the Prime Minister said: “This event annually was mooted after 9/11 and the idea was to help bridge the gap between the west and the Arab and Muslime.

This was happening, the world was watching. It didn’t matter on religion, culture and political systems, it was being a good example of change in the Arab world. We don’t want to interfere in the problems of Syria. We only want what is best for its people,” the Prime Minister said.

Talking about the US-Islamic Forum, the Prime Minister said: “This event annually was mooted after 9/11 and the idea was to help bridge the gap between the west and the Arab and Muslime.

This was happening, the world was watching. It didn’t matter on religion, culture and political systems, it was being a good example of change in the Arab world. We don’t want to interfere in the problems of Syria. We only want what is best for its people,” the Prime Minister said.

Talking about the US-Islamic Forum, the Prime Minister said: “This event annually was mooted after 9/11 and the idea was to help bridge the gap between the west and the Arab and Muslime.

This was happening, the world was watching. It didn’t matter on religion, culture and political systems, it was being a good example of change in the Arab world. We don’t want to interfere in the problems of Syria. We only want what is best for its people,” the Prime Minister said.

Talking about the US-Islamic Forum, the Prime Minister said: “This event annually was mooted after 9/11 and the idea was to help bridge the gap between the west and the Arab and Muslime.

This was happening, the world was watching. It didn’t matter on religion, culture and political systems, it was being a good example of change in the Arab world. We don’t want to interfere in the problems of Syria. We only want what is best for its people,” the Prime Minister said.

Talking about the US-Islamic Forum, the Prime Minister said: “This event annually was mooted after 9/11 and the idea was to help bridge the gap between the west and the Arab and Muslime.

This was happening, the world was watching. It didn’t matter on religion, culture and political systems, it was being a good example of change in the Arab world. We don’t want to interfere in the problems of Syria. We only want what is best for its people,” the Prime Minister said.